Range Safety Orientation Certificate (RSOC) Requirements

1. All new members who plan to use the Range are required to attend a Range Safety Orientation Certification (RSOC) course if they intend to discharge firearms on any of the three club ranges without the presence of a club appointed Range Safety Officer or Instructor supervising the range.

NOTE: Participation in any club activity such as: Turkey Shoots, Pistol or Rifle Matches, Club Competitions or other Club supervised activity does not require possession of a Range Safety Orientation Certificate.

2. If you have already attended, you will have an assigned RSOC number that is written on the back of your membership card with a course completion stand. When you complete your application include this number in the top right section under RSOC number.
3. If you have not taken the course and plan to use the range you will need to complete the first available course after your membership is accepted.

About the Course

The RSOC class consists of a thirty-minute meeting to familiarize individuals with the range layouts and rules pertaining to the safe loading, firing, and unloading of firearms while on club property.

Sign-up for a RSOC class by contacting Ed Lapenas at elapenas@hotmail.com or by texting 339-832-1854

About the Range Status Warning System

The club ranges are now equipped with a visual “Range Status Warning System” consisting of three overhead amber colored strobe lights and four manual switches (in yellow boxes). Any switch will activate the strobes.

The ranges are always to be considered “hot” meaning live firing may commence at any time.

When anyone is moving forward of the designated firing line or if an emergency occurs, the range status warning system (RSWS) should be activated and all firing should cease, weapons should be unloaded, actions open and placed on the range benches. Note that this applies to all three, (A, B and C) ranges.

The person who activates the RSWS is the only person allowed to deactivate the RSWS.

Everyone has a personal responsibility to keep the ranges safe. Always be aware of any and all persons and activities underway when you arrive at the range. Communicate your actions with others present.
